PRESENTATION

A musical identity without borders

Driven by her dual French-Russian culture, Alina Dunaevskaya breaks free from stylistic barriers. While her roots are anchored in rock/metal with her band Markize, her solo project explores pop, rock, and electro sounds. A resolutely cinematic musical direction, to the point that critics have often compared the atmosphere of her single "White Room" to that of a James Bond soundtrack.

A comprehensive and demanding artistic vision

A complete artist, Alina writes her own lyrics, sensitively addressing resilience, hardships, and intimate wounds. But her involvement goes far beyond writing: she manages her entire visual artistic direction. Creating stage outfits, designing sets, writing scripts: she conceives her music videos as true mini-films. A strong aesthetic ambition that has pushed her to shoot in atypical locations, carry out underwater filming, or even share the screen with wolves in the forest of Fontainebleau.

Live experience and collaborations

Active on the music scene since 2004, Alina has forged a solid live experience. Her career is validated by performances on iconic stages such as the Olympia, the Bataclan, or the Shepherd's Bush Empire in London, as well as international tours as the opening act for Tarja Turunen (ex-Nightwish). Her voice and universe have also seduced other artists, leading her to collaborate on projects with Shelby, Ad Inferna, and the artist ROBERT, with whom she shared the Olympia stage for the track "Le Prince Bleu".

News: A dynamic release schedule

After laying the groundwork for her solo universe with several singles and music videos already unveiled, Alina's momentum is accelerating. As she finalizes her independent album, several ambitious music videos, already shot, are currently being edited and are waiting to be revealed. In parallel, this year marks the official return of her historic band Markize, promising a dense and rich double agenda.
